Participants asked to list their past "critical moments" in their lives were given a pre-activity questionnaire and then a 10-minute audio recording of the activity. The questionnaire asked participants to list their past critical moments and to rate the importance of each moment. The audio recording asked participants to describe each critical moment in detail and to explain why it was important to them.

Participants asked by the lead researcher whether they had ever been sexually abused or sexually harassed, all 60 students agreed to participate in the study.
